Increase in the celebration and visibility of diverse communities. Māori communities are equipped, resourced, and empowered in their tino rangatiratanga to address sexual violence in their own communities. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Improved understanding of sexual violence, rape culture, healthy relationships, gender and sexuality, consent, and the experience of survivors. Harmful social norms that normalise violence are disrupted and replaced with positive non-violent and inclusive social norms. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Survivors feel their voice and experiences are valued and respected. Increase in community spaces, public places, and drinking environments that demonstrate leadership, practices, policies, and processes to ensure safe and positive relationships. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> WCC is part of a strong regional community of individuals, communities, and organisations working to collectively prevent sexual violence in Wellington. Wellington has a healthy, sustainable, supported sexual violence sector. Pōneke Promise, and other Govt partners proactively support prevention through legislation, policy and processes.
